STRATO - contemporary design - hidden functionality

With the STRATO, CINEAK is bringing a new breeze into home theater seating product offerings. This truly modular and exclusive model combines a modern clean design with the functionality of a traditional theater seat.

The STRATO chair was designed with a clear vision, 'a beautiful abstract design hiding all functionality'. The seat is fully upholstered with large semi aniline leather, with a minimum of visible stitching and does not reveal its rich functionality.

The concealed dual motorized incline system enables the user to control the leg rest separately from the backrest. While adjusting the back, the head support will automatically move up and down. Loose lumbar cushions can give extra back support, or give an extra finishing touch.

Numerous seating configurations are available making the STRATO chair a functional option for both the home theater and living room.

STRATO

The modular concept of the STRATO allows you to create numerous configurations. Seating parts and armrests come in different sizes and shapes.

The armrests are offered in two sizes, and there is a curved option as well.

The seating parts are available in two different seating widths, and come stationary or with a dual-motorized incline mechanism.

The STRATO can be used as a regular sofa or theater rows can be built using armrests between seating parts.
